HOURS

In this course you will understand how the brain learns, through the analysis of theories, methodologies and empirical research. You will gain skills associated with logical thinking, innovative educational planning and applied teaching in global contexts. Learn about the relationship between the brain and learning, alongside the ideas, methodology, and the current state of knowledge in cognitive neuroscience. In addition to specialised, research-oriented training, the programme teaches key transferable skills.

This course is suitable for teachers and practitioners of all subjects and across all ages. This includes teachers of children with special needs, educational psychologists, education managers, and educators. Especially now, the acquisition of innovative tools based on brain function is necessary for all educators to adapt their methodologies to a changing global world.

UCJC offers the possibility to connect theory and practice in the prestigious context of SEK Group, which has over 125 years in education. Madrid offers a wide range of cultural and social activities which will complete your experience.

About us

UCJC is one of the youngest and fastest-growing universities in Spain and Europe. Founded in 2000, UCJC is part of SEK Education Group, whose proven track record in teaching excellence stretches back over 125 years. As a young university, UCJC is forward-looking and uniquely placed to bridge the gap between traditional and modern times, through a liberal arts and applied sciences approach to higher education.

The university has four different schools: Communications and Humanities, Education, Health and Technology and Science, offering a range of Spanish and European official undergraduate and graduate programmes.
